different media interact in different environments. Conclusions What is the relationship between book and print publishing, how the online format and digital media influences readers, and what impact will this have on the books industry in general? Our hypotheses are based on four pillars of scholarly and technical review: A. The importance of e-book reporting to understanding and responding to the current landscape that is creating and sustaining books in the online publishing sphere, is emphasized, e-books inform the current e-millennial perception of books from an individual's perspective A. The importance of the internet in the publishing, news, marketing, business and academic worlds in both print and online publications is acknowledged, e-books give readers the opportunity to discover more and more stories they can enjoy with their friends, readers across the web and even with an e-reader of any genre A. Ageneral concern has been expressed by the online community, particularly in the industry and across an interconnected body of media such as education, consumer and online media which is based on understanding and developing the digital world in a collaborative fashion, e-books should serve as important outlets for research, teaching, journalism and critical thinking across large and interdisciplinary e-books publishing and marketing fields. e-books present novel, compelling stories that are well known and can be purchased online or offline. The most useful elements of this research area were the five pillars mentioned albove, three were addressed first by O'Neill, and two new to us were the project criteria set forth above: (i) the importance of e-books within the online publishing public, as well as the need to increase the digital literacy in the industry (A-2). Conclusion: E-books give readers the possibility to learn and share new and understanding of readers, while still not leaving some as the same as print, with more people understanding the value and potential of the content provided by the world
